Memorial Gifts Being Sought in Hospital Drive

Popularity of This Form of Subscription Shows Increase as $800,000 Building Fund Campaign Nears End—Twenty-two Subscriptions for Memorial Units Reported.

Twenty-two subscriptions for memorial units have been reported in the Kingston City Hospital campaign, and several units have been reserved for persons who are contemplating subscribing for them. Of those already reported, one is for $6,000, one for $5,000, four for $2,400, one for $1,500 and fifteen for $1,200, the total amount of all being $40,100.

The memorial idea has become increasingly popular during the campaign, as it presents an attractive appeal when it is clearly understood.

The person, family, or organization subscribing for a memorial selects one of the units, which range from a ward bed to an operating room, included in the expansion plans of the hospital, and subscribes for the cost of construction of this unit, which has been carefully approximated. The unit thus selected and subscribed for will be marked with a bronze tablet on which will be inscribed the name of the person or persons the donor wishes to memoralize or commemorate.

The Memorials Reported.

Thus far in the campaign, the Hercules Powder Company has subscribed $6,000 for a memorial to be selected later; Mrs. Hewitt Boice $5,000 for the main waiting room in memory of Hewitt Boice, her husband; Henry R. and William H. Brigham, $2,400 for a private room in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha H. Brigham; Hon. G. D. B. Hasbrouck and daughters $2,400 for a private room in memory of Julia M Hasbrouck, wife and mother of the donors; George E. Lowe, $2,400 for a private room; Benjamin J. Winne, $2,400 for a private room in memory of his father and mother; and J. S. Fuller, Inc., $1,500 for a nursery bath in memory of Isaiah and James S. Fuller.

The following memorials are all for $1,200:

Mrs. F. K. Brewster and Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Brewster subscribed for a ward bed in memory of Frank K. Brewster; Dr. George F. Chandler for a ward bed in memory of Izora Chandler, his mother; H. Dewitt Dobbs for a unit in memory of Charles Wesley See; Heneph Corporation for a ward bed; and C. Hiltebrant Dry Dock Company for a ward bed in memory of C. Hiltebrant.

Mr. and Mr. John B. Kearney subscribed for a bed in a semi-private room; Mrs. Florence Kendall Kelley for a ward bed in memory of Hermon A. Kelley; Kingston Lodge No. 10. F. & A. M., for a unit to be selected; Robert Main for a bed in a semi-private room in memory of Mrs. Robert Main; and McBride Drug Store for a unit in memory of Bernard McBride.

Walter Reade subscribed for a unit; Mrs. John D. Schoonmake, Jr., for a ward bed in memory of Rafael R. Govin, her father; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Shafer for a unit in memory of Colonel B. Shafer; Judge and Mrs. John G. Van Etten for a unit in memory of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. North; and Mrs. Eleanor H. Washburn for a unit in memory of George Washburn, her husband.

Memorials Not Yet Taken.

There are some attractive memorial units which have not yet been subscribed for ranging in price from $1,200 to $10,000. Among these is an operating room costing $10,000; a nursery or the eye, ear and nose operating room for $6,000; a visitor's waiting room for $3,000 several private rooms for $2,400; and either nurses' stations or ward beds for $1,200 each.

The workers seek these memorial subscriptoins, and the announcements of them at the meetings are always vigorously applauded. The next and final campaign meeting is the Victory Dinner at the state armory on Tuesday night, June 15. All additional memorial subscriptions will be announced then, and as these subscriptions will be one of the decisive factors in the success of the campaign, the announcement of them will be a feature of the dinner.

Ten or More Killed in Coke Plant Explosion

Terrific Explosion at Gary, Ind., Coke Plant Killed at Least 10 and Injured More Than 100—Many of The Injured Horribly Mangled.

Gary, Ind., June 14.—Ten or more men were killed and more than 100 injured, many seriously, in a terrific explosion at the coke plant of the Illinois Steel Company here today. The blast shook the entire city and threw the residents into a near panic.

Every available ambulance was rushed to the scene and police and fire department vehicles also were used to convey the injured, some of them in a dying condition, to hospitals.

Officials of the steel company immediately threw a heavy guard around the plant and declined to give out any estimates of the number of dead and injured. Police, however, declared that at least ten men were dead and 100 or more badly hurt, some probably fatally.

The cause of explosion has not been determined, although it was learned that the blast resulted from the ignition of gases in one or more of the huge coke ovens. Steel and burning coal in process of conversion into coke were hurled in all directions, scattering death among the workmen.

Deadly fumes from the ovens also added to the casualties, it was said.

Smoke from the explosion, held down by the heavy, damp atmosphere, forced rescue workers to labor in semi-darkness.

Nine of the dead has been identified.

Among the injured identified were Russell Phillips, Charles Holland, Felix Renick, John Kozak, James Floyd, Lloyd Collier and Harry Faris, all of Gary.

Eight bodies were found in the ruins of the building shortly before noon.

Many of the injured were horribly mangled by the blast. Several workers were thrown hundreds of feet by the force of the explosion, while scattering acid added to the horror of the scene.

Company officials said the blast was probably caused by one of the big "saturators" blowing up, bursting open with tremendous force, wrecking the building and scattering death and destruction in the form of pieces of broken steel, flames, deadly fumes, and lethal acid.

Faster Service For Long Distance

New York Telephone Company Establishes New Method by Which Many Long Distance Calls Will Be Secured Promptly.

The New York Telephone Company announces thhe establishment of a new and improved method of operation in handling calls from Kingston to most out of town places with which the people of the city do a considerable amount of business.

The effect of the new method to the telephone user will be to provide a faster service to the points affected in that, in a great many cases, it will not be necessary for the subscriber to hang up his receiver; he will hold the line until the call is completed, the same as on a local call. This will not always be the case, however, for, when circuits to the desired point are busy the subscriber will hang up and be called back, as heretofore.

A Kingston telephone subscriber, wishing to call one of the points affected by the new method of operation, will ask for "Long distance" and file his call, just as he has always done. If a circuit to the desired point is immediately available, he will be asked to hold the line while the call is completed. Where a circuit is not available he will be asked to hang up his receiver and he will be called back when a circuit is free.

Commenting on the introduction of the new system of operation, F. C. R. Potter, local commercial manager, said today: "The introduction of the new high speed service to most out of town points should prove a valuable asset to the business men of the city. A good deal of business is done over the telephone with out-of-town places and we have instituted this improved method of operation in the interests of faster service. In communities where the high speed service has been established for some time, it has proved very popular and has been of great value to telephone users."

Referendum on Sale of Church

Less Than One-third of Congregation Have Voted on Proposition to Sell St. John's Church—Ninety-one Favor, Sixteen Oppose Sale.

At the 10:45 o'clock service at St. John's Episcopal Church on Wall street on Sunday, the rector, the Rev. Edward M. H. Knapp, announced the following figures as the result to date of the referendum asked for of the parishioners by postal as to the sale of the present site of the church:

Cards sent out, 350.

Replies received, 103.

Of the cards received, two—one in favor and the other opposed to the sale of the site—were unsigned and so would have no value. One signer neither approved nor opposed the sale but did not consider it feasible. Sixteen opposed the sale and 91 were in favor of it. Mr. Knapp also stated that no effort had been made to influence any one to sign the cards.

No statement was made as to the time of the meeting of the standing committee of the Diocese in New York city, when the application for sale would be presented, probably because a special meeting will have to be called if the matter is presented this summer. The regular meetings of the standing committee are held the first Thursday of each month, with the exception of the summer vacation months, so that the last regular meeting had been held before the first announcement of the sale was made by letter to the parishioners. It is understood that those opposed as well as those in favor of the sale will be notified in due time if such special meeting is called.

Catholics from Every Corner of World at Chicago

Great Preparations Underway to Accommodate "Greatest Caravan of Humanity"—Colorful Ceremony in New York.

Chicago, June 14.—How the cross girdles the globe was told Chicago today.

From Europe, Australia, Africa, South America—every corner of the world—pilgrims trooped here to attend the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress, opening June 20.

From China, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Ireland, Spain, France, Alaska, Cape Good Hope, Siberia, Algiers, India, Mexico and from Indians' tepees on America's western plains, Catholics poured into Chicago today, all gathering to join in a great tribute to Christ through a gigantic re-enactment of the Lord's Last Supper.

While the advance guard of the "greatest caravan of humanity in history" with its 15 cardinals, 400 bishops, 8,000 priests, 13,000 nuns and 750,000 laymen arrived, an army of workmen rushed to completion 500 altars and scores of outdoor platforms where the crowds will assemble for next week's devotions.

Tomorrow the 10,000 extra policemen, 25,000 special train handlers and thousands of other workers recruited to care for the visitors will be in service and Thursday Chicago will turn to welcoming Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate to the congress.

He will arrive from New York with a distinguished delegation of European cardinals, archbishops, bishops, monsignori, nuns and priests.

Civic Chicago in every department will be represented in a parade marking the arriving of the papal legate and delegates from every Catholic society, including 1,000 uniformed fourth degree Knights of Columbus, will bow in greeting to the visitors from across the seas.

One of the delegates from distant lands already in Chicago is Sir Joseph Lo Pa Hong, the richest man in China. Sir Joseph, who is the guest of E. N. Hurley, formerly of the United States Shipping Board, brought with him from China a dazzling set of vestments which will be worn by the Catholic chieftains during the congress.

All of the garments are gold-embroidered and studded, like a field of wild flowers, with pearls, jade, Beryl and agate stones in varied colors. Each carries the design of wheat, typifying the bread of the eucharist and purple grapes, symbolical of the eucharist wine.

The board of directors of the local Y. M. C. A. at the request of the Boys' Work Committee has established a new rate for boys who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of being a member of the "Y" and enjoy the swimming pool and showers during the hot summer days.

This is a new feature and is available to all boys of the city who would like to make use of the big swimming pool.

With the new filtration system working perfectly, the water that the boys swim in makes the safest bathing spot in the city. The secretary of the boys' division is working on special plans for activities this summer that will appeal to all boys.

Straight Talks With Aunt Emmy

ON HOW TO LOSE YOUR INHERITANCE

"It is so hard for me to get along on what John left me," complained Mrs. Norris to Aunt Emmy. "Junior wants to get a job, but I always wanted him to go to college—"

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted Aunt Emmy, "but what about this mining stock?"

"I'm coming to that. You see I thought I could invest some of those bonds John left, they yield such a tiny income, in something that would bring real money. I needed more money, so when the telephone rang that day and a man, he had the nicest voice, said he had been referred to me by a friend and wanted to talk over some gilt edged investments, I told him to come right up.

"His name was Mr. Stanhope. He was so nice. He told me all about the big money people are making in platinum mines. Platinum jewelry is so fashionable now. He said he could let me have some stock in a wonderful mine, and that the company would buy the stock back if I ever wanted my money."

"Have you a statement signed by one of the officers of the mining company to the effect that the company will repurchase your stock?" asked Aunt Emmy.

"Why, no—"

"Well, you will have trouble getting your money back. A company cannot be compelled to buy its own stock back"

"Oh, I don't know. Anyhow, I got out my bonds and showed them to him—"

"What, you keep your bonds in the house instead of at the bank!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy.

"Why, yes, but in a box that locks—and Mr. Stanhope said that he was surprised that a woman with the good business judgment I had should be getting such a small income as those bonds paid—scarcely anything. He said that I should make my money work harder for me. He knew I must have good business judgment, he said, because I brought my children up so beautifully. He offered to take the bonds and change them for his stock."

"Oh, Lord!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy, "did he give you a receipt?"

"Why, of course, he was the nicest man. But Junior said after he left that he didn't like him. He said he looked slick. Boys are so funny. Well, I got the platinum stock, but Mr. Barnes at the bank says it's no good. He must be mistaken. But I want my bonds back, so I came to you for help. And you're always so lucky about your investments."

"Not lucky, just sensible," corrected Aunt Emmy. "Why, oh, why, don't you consult your banker, who understands finance, before you risk your money? This is not your first loss. Remember that piece of land you bought that was under water?"

"That was different," said Mrs. Norris, blushing, "and anyway, Mr. Stanhope is honest, I can tell that."

"If he were honest he would not have promised you the things he promised. Reputable houses don't send out representatives who make promises about repurchase of stock. Why don't you 'phone your Mr. Stanhope?"

"I did, but he's out of town. I've written, too, but I suppose I shall have to wait until he gets back. It's been several weeks now, so he should be back soon."

Just then the evening paper came. Aunt Emmy glanced at it, then read it attentively. Her expression grew serious. She handed the paper to Mrs. Norris. On the front page was an account of a financial scandal. The house that sold Mrs. Norris her mining stock was involved and the men who ran the business had been indicted for fraud.—A. B. Aymes.

Known and Found Wanting

Irvin S. Cobb, the humorous writer, and lecturer, was praising women novelists—Sarah G. Millin and the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden" and Susan Glaspell.

"How those women know us men," he said, "and how they despise us! Elizabeth especially despises us. Her works make me think of a story.

"Mrs. Blank and her daughter, on a visit to Palm Beach, were returning to their rooms after tea in the Cocoanut grove.

"'I wonder,' said the daughter, 'if papa has got back from his golf yet?'

"Mrs. Blank laughed—a hard, metallic laugh.

"'Hum a jazz tune,' she said, 'and spray a little Eau de Venus in the air, and your father, if he's within a mile of us, will stick his head out of his bedroom door to flirt with the chambermaid.'"

State Checks Gipsy Moths

Ninety Per Cent of Colonies Discovered in Barrier Zone Have Been Eradicated—Work Started in 1923.

Albany, June 14.—A check-up on the gipsy moth control work just made by the Conservation Commission shows that over ninety per cent of the colonies of gipsy moths discovered in the barrier zone east of the Hudson river have been eradicated and the balance have been reduced so that their eradication is in sight.

A further encouraging factor is that no spread of the insect has been discovered since the Gipsy moth barrier zone campaign was organized. This is the first time that such a record has been established for a similar period of years since 1905.

The gipsy moth is the most serious forest, shade and fruit tree pest the country has yet experienced. It has cost the New England states over $24,000,000 solely as a financial outlay for control work. If loss of valuable timber areas, the retardation of the growth over extensive forest sections, the loss due to forced premature cutting and the loss of fruit crops were to be enumerated, they would exceed by many times the financial outlay.

In spite of the enormous control expenditures incurred by the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, state, town, city, park and other agencies, the westward airline spread of the pest continued at an average of over six miles per year from 1905 to 1922. In the latter year the presence of the pest was discovered in one town in New York state. The following year it was again discovered in two additional towns, all along the New England border. These discoveries led to the start of a campaign by the Conservation Commission to prevent the further westward spread of the insect. A systematic plan was outlined, the enforcement of which was started in August, 1923. This campaign has since been continuously in operation, principally in eastern New York and western New England, the work in the New England part of the area being administered under direction of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology.

The area in which the most intensive part of the project has been enforced extends from the Canadian border to Long Island Sound, comprising ninety-one towns in eastern New York and one hundred and ninety-four in western New England, or a total of 3,836 square miles in the former and 4,592 in the latter. The work has demonstrated that the start of the project was a timely one. Quite well-established colonies have been discovered in Essex, Washington, Rensselaer, Columbia, Dutchess, Ulster and Albany counties. In addition it has been found that a serious condition prevailed along the New York border in New England.

The New Moralists

William Lyon Phelps, the noted critic, said at a reception in New Haven:

"Our new school of psychoanalytic novelists champion everybody except the virtuous and hard-working. The bad, according to these fad-followers, are better than the good.

"Their reasoning reminds me of an anecdote. A chap fell on the back of his head. When he got up he growled:

"'I think a full-grown man who throws a banana skin on the pavement is a skunk.'

"'Ah,' said another chap, 'but what do you think of a banana skin that throws a full-grown man on the pavement?'"

Use of Color in New Paris Gowns

Pleasing Shades Feature of Winsome Attire—Taffeta in Demand.

Refinement, taste, novelty in detail and an appreciation of color are apparent in the latest fashions, in the absence of anything revolutionary. Color, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times, has intrigued all of the designers and inspired some enchanting costumes. It is the gospel that is being preached by every contributor to the art of dress from the designer of fabrics to the couturier, who establishes a mode of importance. The older masters, and some of those who are swiftly rising this season, create gowns for women of all types and ages and of greater art value than have been shown for many a year. Materials are in themselves a delight, the soft, supple crepes, voiles, mousselines, the lustrous silks with pulsating tints and shades. Most of these have already made their place, but this season are shown in countless new variants, finer and more lovely. Taffeta has made such a wide sweep that the demand can scarcely be met, and, in the filmy weaves, mousseline de soie has returned after many years more charming than ever.

All of these are the latest things in fabrics for the evening gowns and wraps that are now presented. Taffeta is used most for the picturesque period gowns of wide skirts with crinolined effects. The softer styles are tremendously popular at the moment, such as the flounced, flaring and petal frocks that are so entrancing in the dance.

Whole groups of this type of gown designed in one mood or another are shown by the Parisian dressmakers. They are particularly happy in models for young women for informal evening frocks, dainty and chic, and in heavenly colors. In one of these models from Nicole Groult, a frock of subtle simplicity is made of pink mousseline de soie, the entire skirt of which from belt to hem is covered with flounces of silk lace dyed in the same shade. The sleeveless bodice, cut in easy blouse lines, has a deep oval decolletage, with tucker of the lace. A soft girdle of the mousseline marks a moderately low waistline and a trailing garniture of roses with long sash ends of the mousseline forms a finish at one side.

Much Lace Is Used.

A great deal of lace is being used on these evening gowns, even Spanish lace, with which Jenny has illustrated a new and altogether interesting treatment. In one of her jeune fille models she has trimmed the skirt with ruffles of the lace gathered as full as ruching and sewn on, row after row. An enchanting little gown designed by a French dressmaker is of light green mousseline de soie. The decollete, sleeveless bodice is the inevitable straight model, to which the skirt is attached with several rows of shirring. To this is added a flounce of filmy lace in ivory tint, the pattern of which is traced with paint in delicate shades of green, rose and gilt. In a stylish but conventional evening gown from Molyneux two flounces are gathered in straight lines on the skirt of an all-over ecru lace frock over which is worn a sleeveless coat of the same lace.

Black lace is considered extremely smart this season, and in many attractive models is made over a colored lining of crepe or chiffon. Madeleine des Hayes has made an adorable little frock of unusually sheer black chantilly lace over pale rose crepe. The neck is cut round and rather high, and little narrow ruchings of the lace finish the arm-holes and outline the bottom of the skirt in scallops. In many of the evening gowns of sheer goods the edge of ruffles, folds and skirts is scalloped and one in a new-old idea is trimmed from top to bottom of the skirt with ruffles cut in points, in chiffon that shades from pale to deep rose, having the effect of massed flower petals. Another frock is like a double marigold of yellow tulle, the ruffles gathered full on the outer layer of a triple skirt. These pretty frocks reflect the symbolism of gay gardens and bright fields in intriguing contrast to the all-black which is now the rage.

Dainty Afternoon Frock of Apple Green With Wide Gypsy Girdle.

Black in any and all of the season's fabrics is exceedingly fashionable, but the craze of the moment is for sheer black—chiffon, mousseline de soie, tulle. From almost every house of authority in Paris are received black gowns for evening, and many other charming designs are from American dressmakers.

Jean Patou makes a gown of black crepe de chine, the bodice slightly bloused, the skirt with a cascade of the material on each side, beginning at the belt and dropping low, to form an irregular hemline. Bands of strass passementerie trim the front of the bodice from each shoulder to a deep point over the girdle, making the one brilliant high light. An original little frock from Jenny is entirely of black lace, over black satin, the skirt trimmed from top to bottom with narrow ruffles of the lace and the long sleeves which are now so fashionable are plain at the top with rows of the lace ruffles covering the space between elbow and wrist.

Charming Crepe de Chine Afternoon Frock of Seashell Rose.

For Evening Wear.

The bolero in different arrangements, shapes and lengths is shown on many evening gowns, rather more on those of sheer stuffs than on any other. Chanel is going in strong for them, and has presented a stunning creation in black chiffon, one of the few strikingly new designs of the late collections. To the short skirt she has added a long tail of the chiffon, and repeats the line with a pointed bolero swinging from the deep round decollete neck. The bodice is sleeveless and the gown is untrimmed.

The ensemble idea is presented in some attractive evening costumes in which a wrap is made to match the gown, with slippers, stockings and even a dainty bag and fan of the same color. A late model in ensemble from the des Hayes atelier is done in pale blue crepe Elizabeth embroidered in bands of delicate detail with silver thread and entredeux of silver lace. A long cape of the blue material, made on soft, simple lines, gathered at the neck, with cords to tie, is lined with silver cloth and trimmed around the bottom with deep points of silver lace. Slippers of silver and blue brocade and stockings of the laciest blue chiffon, are to be worn with this costume, and a fan of pale blue silk edged with a line of silver is painted in a pretty scene.

New Styles in Wraps.

There are countless new styles in evening wraps, those best liked on this side at this season being of crepe, taffeta and other light fabrics in contrast to the richer velvet manteaux. Fur is still used even on the spring and summer models, but in those varieties known, paradoxically, as "summer fur."

A wrap of a lovely shade of green known by various names, one of which—leaf green—seems best to describe it, is of bengaline lined with crepe de chine, with a collar of the material shirred and padded into a roll shape and with a bottom trimming of baby skunk. This bottom band is not new, but has apparently a tenacious hold on fashion life. Another wrap in sea green has a collar of white fox dyed in the same shade. Quilted taffeta is much used in some of the new wraps, and in all of the latest coats and wraps from Parisian houses taffeta is given much attention in detail of needlework, stitching and tucking.

In some of the most important evening costumes that come from the other side, scarfs are worn as wraps with evening gowns. This has inspired a number of new styles of scarf to be used in this way. One is a reflection of the Spanish shawl, with the large conventional floral pattern printed on a long, wide scarf of chiffon or thin crepe. These are showy, colorful affairs, with the flowers reproduced in brilliant colors on the most fragile fabrics. Shawls of fine crepe in plain white and light colors are trimmed with deep silk fringe, on which the design is printed, and other evening scarfs of sheer stuff are effectively hand-painted with traceries of gilt.

Old Egyptian Theater

Gayet wrote of a marionette theater discovered at Antinoe which was intended for the presentation of a sort of Passion play upon the anniversary of the death of Osiris. This is the oldest miniature theater yet unearthed by archeologists. It was found in the tomb of Khelmis, singer of Osiris.

The theater is built in the form of a Nile galley, the proscenium arch being the roof of the cabin, and the asbestos curtain of our theaters supplied by two ivory doors, cunningly carved. The action of the drama took place inside the cabin.

We may imagine that Cleopatra, as a child, sat upon a swan's wool cushion before such a theater and learned the mysteries of the religion which she was to serve as high priestess.—Century Magazine.

"Pioneer Life"

This is printed in the American Legion Weekly as a schoolgirls' composition:

"Once upon a time man went to get ready to go to town, he got his gun, and his food, and his cloths and went out to get his hoars, and he got his satell and satelled his hoars, and saed good By to his wief and started of.

"he saw a deer he started to shoot it But Mised it.

"and wen he got to town he got h's grocerrels and started Back home.

"he saw a rabbet and shot the rabbet and took it home and lived happy ever after."

Changes Flowers' Color

To give blossoms fit for exhibition delicate shades, an English florist drops silver salts in the water in which the flowers stand. Silver bi-oxide forms and the action of the chemical changes the natural color of the blossoms, giving them shades not possible under natural conditions. After the coloring has proceeded to a satisfactory degree, the salts are removed and a few crumbs of slacked lime or mortar added to "fix" the tint.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

CAKE SALE FOR BENEFIT OF BLIND A SUCCESS

The special cake sale for the benefit of the Albany Association of the blind which will next week bring to Kingston articles made by its members for sale here, was held at the L. B. Van Wagenen store on Saturday, and was a great success. The sale was in progress from 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. under the supervision of Mrs. Joseph Bennett, chairman; Mrs. William Baker, Mrs. David Schenck, Mrs. William Morris, Mrs. William Rudderham, Mrs. William Dugan, Mrs. J. D. Pfrommer, and Mrs. Thomas Hayes. About $75 will be the financial results. The idea of these advance food sales was that of Mrs. Hayes, and with this fund any blind person whose articles do not strike the fancy of the buying public, so that they receive their fair share of the returns, will be helped out so as not to be too seriously disappointed. All of the articles are beautifully made and their failure to sell will not be due to their lack of intrinsic worth. If all of the fund is not needed for this use, and it probably will not be, it goes to help in the care of those who may be sick among the Blind Association members. The food offered for sale on Saturday was exceptionally fine and the committee in charge wish to thank all that large number of persons who solicited the food as well as all who contributed the same.

Papooses and Dogs

There always is a puppy for every papoose on the Glacier National park reservation. And, thrown in for good measure, as pets are a few cubs of bear and other animal species susceptible of tepee domestication. But the Indian children soon tire of the wild pets because, as the young mountain beasts grow larger they bite and scratch fiercely, rendering them unsafe playmates. The dogs are different, always becoming fonder of their companions as they grow up together. Hence the reason for the old saying that on a reservation the canine population always keeps pace with the Indian population.

It is not clear why some observers question the sanity of a 17-year-old Philadelphia boy merely because he confessed in court that he had been guilty of 41 hold-ups in 30 days. Thomas A. Edison believes that the American public has declared against the "talking movie." Some may question his conclusion that "talking from the lips of the figures on the screen destroys the illusion," but there can be no question as to the correctness of his view that a "restful quiet" is desirable. This "restful quiet," following excess of noise, clamor and chatter, is undoubtedly one of the attractions of the silent drama.

It is proposed to erect a monument to Virginia Dare. The pretty name is best known in our time in connection with a mild and pleasant beverage, but it originally belonged to the first child of English parents born in the New World. Little Virginia Dare first saw the light in the ill-fated colony settled by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1587, which three years later was found to have disappeared and left no trace, its members having been either killed by the Indians or become the victims of privation and illness.

San Francisco is undergoing a carpenters' strike. The calling of the strike was immediately followed by the importation of a bunch of professional sluggers, who began the regulation assault on men who insisted upon working. It is time this common system of slugging men who insist on working stop in this country. Men have the legal and moral right to quit work if they want to, but they have no legal or moral right to prevent other men from working. Strikers must depend on public opinion to win, and that opinion is quicker won by fair means than foul. The slugging system, which is not approved by the great majority of union men, has done much to condemn unionism with the public.

THE CRIME OF PERJURY.

In a recent notorious case a man was not punished for his two known offenses but for giving false testimony in his own behalf. To fine him $2,900 and imprison him a year for the latter alone has been criticized as severe. A little lying is so common that there is a tendency, while not excusing it, to look upon it with a certain tolerance of the inevitable. Perjury in a court of law, however, is an offense of greater gravity than seems to be rather widely supposed, and this because it may do incalculable harm by defeating the ends of justice. How extremely serious an offense it is was recently pointed out in a bar association address by Justice Black of the New York Supreme Court, who declared that it causes more misery, injustice and contempt for the law than all the other crimes in the penal code, because, unlike other crimes, it may pervade every trial.

Perjury is or may be so calamitous in its results that Justice Black went so far as to suggest that the death penalty—though not actually advocating it—might be the best and most wholesome deterrent. "Certainly," he is quoted, "it is not too much to ask that perjury in a murder case shall be punished with the same severity meted out to the man who is being tried for murder. I would make it impossible for a man convicted of perjury to inherit any property, and I should favor a law to escheat his entire assets to the state." Even if this view may seem extreme, it shows how hasty has been the criticism of the Earl Carroll penalty and that the punishment was lighter than might have been expected. Perversion of justice by false testimony in a court of law is no small matter, and many court witnesses are in need of such a reminder as has now been given them.

A NEW THOUGHT ON CANCER.

Some months ago an European scientist announced the discovery of the organism that caused cancer. He described it as a vegetable organism shaped like the letter S.

He stated that it caused cancer only in those cases that were predisposed to it.

These organisms are not found in the cancer tissue itself but in the tissues around the cancer. In fact these organisms are rapidly destroyed in the cancer tissue proper.

Now whether this is the cause of cancer or not only time will tell, but there were a couple of other statements made by this research man, Dr. Schumacher, that are worthy of our attention.

He stated that not only did cancer occur only in those predisposed to it, but this predisposition only developed with advancing age. As we grow older the lymphatic glands which take care of the fats seem to lose some of their power, and so a sufficient amount of the fermenting substances was not manufactured to split up the fatty substances, fatty albumens, as they were called.

Now as cancer rarely starts before forty years of age, and the average age of cancer cases run about sixty, it would appear as if this research man may be on the right track.

If he is, then it may mean that the day will come when methods of assisting the digestion of these fatty albumens will be attained, and thus cancer be prevented.

It is said that cancer is not hereditary, but there can be no question but that the tendency toward it runs in families, just as do other traits and tendencies.

If this then is found to be the true cause of cancer it would mean that diet, the proper kind for this particular type of individual, will be the big factor in the treatment. This may be helped somewhat by some digestant.

And so just as tuberculosis is not considered hereditary anymore, nevertheless the children of tuberculosis parents are placed in preventoriums with splendid results, it may be possible that the same methods will be used in families predisposed to cancer, when the members thereof reach middle age.

Now whether or not this research man has found the cause of cancer, he has in any case brought home some points that appeal to our common sense.

WHY

Fastness of Dye Is Not Question of Color

It is a common fallacy that green, lavender, or some other color is less fast than blue or pink. Fastness depends on the chemical composition of the dye used, not on the color.

Dyestuffs are grouped into various classes according to their composition, and the dyes in some classes are more fast than those in others. Thus a green, blue, or any other fabric may have received its color from any one of a number of different dyestuffs varying widely in permanency. Without knowing just what kind of a dye was used—and it is practically impossible for the consumer to tell this—the fastness of color in two fabrics cannot be predicted. A dye that is one of the poorest of its class may have been used on one of the fabrics, while the other may have been dyed with one of the best. Green, lavender, or any one color is just as fast as another if similar dyes are used.

Why Eyeglass Lenses Call for Expert Work

Fuel control in heating operations is a very important factor in making eyeglass lenses. The temperatures that are required for the operations also are very high, which makes exactness hard to attain.

The crude glass is first melted and pressed into rough shape in an oven at a temperature of 1,800 to 1,900 degrees F. Then the glasses that have been roughly shaped in the molding ovens are placed in a glass-fired lehr at a temperature of 1,000 degrees F. Here they move about on an endless belt, which moves so slowly that no motion is perceptible.

The lenses then are ready to be ground, and the fineness of this work may be ascertained when one realizes that the maximum variation allowed is one-quarter of one-thousandth of an inch.

Why Necklaces Are Worn

We have often wondered why women wear necklaces. At last the secret is out. Beauty specialists claim that they are onto the secret. They say that aside from the decorative value of neck chains, or strung beads or pearls and all other such ornaments, they are usually worn to lend charm to the physical qualities of the feminine neck. They are not worn, in most cases, because they are ornaments. They are actually worn to make the homely neck appear beautiful and the beautiful neck appear more beautiful.

Why Moloch Was Banned

Moloch was the chief deity of the Ammonites, mentioned in I Kings 11:7, as the "abomination of the children of Ammon." The worship of Moloch, which consisted chiefly in the sacrifice of human victims, was established in Jerusalem by Solomon and abolished by Josiah. It was not abandoned, however, by the Jews until the time of the Babylonian captivity. The word "Moloch" is figuratively used to denote any pernicious influence that entails loss of life or sacrifice of principle, as the Moloch of war, the Moloch of ambition, etc.—Exchange.

Why Ripe Apples Shine

The apple has the peculiar trait of waxing its skin which makes it impervious to moisture from the outside, and also prevents the escape of juices within. This is one of the reasons why apples keep so well. The subject of the waxing of apples has not been given much study, yet it is known that it develops to the greatest extent on apples which are grown in direct sunlight, and that the wax is thickest on the sunny side.

Why Sky Is Blue

The sky or air which surrounds the earth is filled with countless tiny specks of what we may call dust—particles of solid things hanging or floating in the air. These specks are of just the size and quality that they catch and absorb part of the rays of light which form our sunlight and throw off the rest of the rays, and the part which has been absorbed forms the combination of color which makes the sky so beautifully blue.

Why Hair Turns Gray

Dr. L. A. Hausman says that hair turns gray because of the failure of the little cells which form the cortex of the hair down in the base of the hair follicle and around the papilla to deposit pigment material. He asserts, therefore, that gray hair is never produced overnight.

Why Shotgun "Kicks"

A shotgun begins to kick the moment the bullet begins to leave its resting place in the gun. The reason that a person does not have to sight his target below, is because this factor is allowed in the manufacture of the gun. The gun is so made that the bullet may be aimed directly at the target.

Why Mistletoe Is Disliked

The mistletoe plant fastens itself upon the tree, penetrates its tissues and draws nourishment from it, deforming it and sapping its vitality. Yet the mistletoe is a green leafy plant; that is, it possesses the pigment chlorophyll, which gives the green color of normal vegetation.

Why Fish Do Without Sleep

The bureau of fisheries says that fish do not sleep. They rest and remain quiet in nooks of streams, but never close their eyes.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

General Robert Hunter Arrives as Governor of New York and New Jersey, June 14, 1710.

On June 14, 1710, attended by a fleet and army, Major General Robert Hunter arrived at New York, bearing the commission of governor, and was inaugurated with usual ceremonies.

A native of Scotland, Hunter first entered upon the business of life as apprentice to an apothecary; but running away from his master, he enlisted in the army as a common soldier, serving under William III., and the Duke of Marlborough in Belgium, and rose to be major general. His fine talents, handsome person and graceful address, won for him the friendship of Dean Swift, Addison Steele and others, also the hand of Lady Elizabeth Hay, daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Arby, and widow of Lord John Hay.

Hunter was not only a soldier and courtier, but a scholar and wit as well. In 1707, his friend Addison being under secretary of state, Hunter was appointed governor of Virginia, but on the voyage thither was captured by a French privateer, and carried into France, where he remained a captive two years, when he was exchanged for the Bishop of Quebec.

On his reaching England, Queen Anne offered Hunter the governorship of Jamaica, but Lord Lovelace of New York dying at this juncture, that government became vacant, and he chose it instead.

Governor Hunter brought with him 3,000 Germans from the Palatinate. The emigration of these poor fugitives from religious persecution forms one of the most striking and romantic episodes in the colonial history of America, especially in that of New York and Pennsylvania.

The Queen and Parliament had sent these German Lutheran refugees to America at the public expense. Some settled on Livingston's Manor, some in Schoharie Valley, some on the Upper Mohawk at the "German Flats," and some in the city of New York, where they built a Lutheran Church. A large portion of these Palatines later settled in Pennsylvania and became the ancestors of much of the present German population in that state. A few went to North Carolina.

It was during Hunter's administration that the remnant of the Tuscarora nation fled from North Carolina (1712) and joined their Iroquois brethren in New York, and so made that Confederacy a league of Six Nations. In the same year the inhabitants of New York were greatly disturbed by apprehensions of an impending servile insurrection. A large portion of the population of the city were negro slaves.

At this time there was a brisk slave-trade carried on at New York, Newport and Boston. The slaves in New York were held in most abject bondage, and the masters were forbidden by law to set them free. In 1709 a slave market was established at the foot of Wall street, where they were sold and hired.

But the negro uprising was only one of the many difficulties which constantly confronted the able and scholarly Hunter. When he met his first assembly in September, 1710, he followed out instructions similar to those given to his predecessor, but he found himself threatened by controversy in relation to permanent revenue, which he only avoided by a prorogation of the house until the following spring.

In addition to his own financial trouble, the authorities further harassed him by refusing to pay his bills incured in behalf of the Palatines. He found even a worse condition in New Jersey, of which province he was also governor.

But to add to these difficulties religious dissensions soon broke out, and Hunter was reported to be luke warm toward the Established Church.

In the spring of 1711 his attention was called to a matter of graver importance, when the ministry had determined to attempt once more to invade Canada. Colonel Nicholson made a bloodless acquisition of Acadia. In the meantime 1,500 provincial militia and 800 Indians, were assembled at Albany, preparatory to an attack on Montreal. But, as usual, the cooperative fleet failed to arrive until too late to be effective. The shameful failure of this expedition was particularly unfortunate.

While these events were transpiring Hunter was having frequent and violent contests with the Assembly, the latter asserting that they possessed an inherent right to legislate, but the governor would not assent to this republican doctrine.

Finally he became worn out. At one time he wrote: "I have spent three years in such torture and vexation that nothing in life can make amends for it."

In 1719 failing health compelled him to return to England. He sailed July 31, leaving the government of the province in the hands of Colonel Peter Schuyler, the senior member of his council.

The career of Governor Hunter after retiring from New York was comparatively uneventful. In July, 1727, he was appointed governor of Jamaica, which office he held until his death, which occurred there, May 11, 1734.

Jimmy Got a Bargain

Jimmie is a little urchin who often comes into the chain store where I work, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. He seems always hungry, and is continually pricing candy and other dainties displayed on the counters, but frequently he has no money with which to buy anything, which has gotten me into the habit of answering him carelessly and at random.

The other afternoon, on his way home from school he came in—and, rubbing his dirty fingers against a glass jar of fine big chocolates standing on the counter, he asked: "How many of these for a nickel?"

"O, two or three," I replied unthinkingly.

"All right," said Jimmie, producing his nickel, "gimme three."

Tell him to take Cod Liver Oil for a couple of months and get enough good healthy flesh on his bones to look like a real man.

Tell him, it's the only way to take those grave-like hollows from his cheeks and neck.

Tell him he won't have to swallow the nasty oil with the nauseating fishy taste because the McCoy Laboratories of New York, are now putting up Cod Liver Oil in sugar coated tablet form.

Ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—every druggist sells them—60 tablets—60 cents. Any man or woman can put on five pounds of healthy flesh in 30 days or your druggist is authorized to refund the purchase price.

One woman put on 15 pounds in six weeks. Children grow robust and strong—Feeble, old people feel younger in a few weeks.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine and avoid imitations.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

THE MUD EEL

"They take pity on me, they do," said the Mud Eel.

Some of the insects stopped twisting and crawling about, looking from their little homes to the little home of the Mud Eel, and said, in insect language:

"Why do they take pity on you?

"And who are 'they?'"

"'They,'" said the Mud Eel, "are people."

"Children, too?" asked the insects.

"Children, too," the Mud Eel agreed.

"Well, now that 'they' have been explained to us you can go on with your story."

"But 'they' haven't been explained to you, for I don't understand them myself.

"How can I explain what I don't understand? People and children are a puzzle to me," the Mud Eel continued.

"I don't understand them at all.

"They talk queerly, they walk queerly, they eat strange food.

"They talk and giggle. They have funny ideas. Children go to places called schools—where they learn to spell and read and write.

"How can I explain all that?

"I can't.

"For the life of me I don't see why they want to know how to read and spell and write.

"What good are such things going to do them? They aren't given meals for writing things down on a slate.

"I know we never, never would be."

"Well," said the insects and snakes, "we meant that we knew who you meant by 'they.'

"We can't understand people ourselves.

"Certainly their ways are beyond our understanding. We don't know why they eat the food they do, why children go to school, why they walk instead of crawl and talk instead of hiss and whisper, and sing.

"I Don't Understand Them."

"We don't know why they wear clothes and talk as they do and walk sometimes with their arms entwined with each other as they do.

"We don't understand people ourselves.

"But now tell us why the people pity you. None of us can really understand people it would seem.

"So you might as well go on with your story as best you can, leaving out such things neither or none of us can understand—such as people and their ways.

"And that includes children and their ways.

"So go on with your story, Mud Eel.

"Pray continue."

"I am put near the insects," said the Mud Eel, "and yet I belong to the snake family.

"I am a younger cousin, or distant relative of the Congo Snake, but I have no hind legs.

"And that is what bothers the people.

"The keeper tells them I have gills outside my body and they smile politely but are not much interested.

"Then he tells them that I have no hind legs, only a pair of front legs, and they say to each other:

"'How very queer. Isn't that odd! How very queer! Isn't that odd?'

"Yes, they pity me and I don't want their pity.

"No, I don't want it.

"I don't need it. I am not here to be pitied.

"Ah, how often I wish I could speak people's language instead of the language of the Mud Eel and I would say to them:

"'Oh, children and people, why do you think it is so queer, and pity me, because I only have one pair of legs?

"'You only have one pair of legs yourselves—and we think yours are queer.'

"I think that would quiet them all right. Yes, that would make them stop thinking we were so odd.

"At least I hope it would," the Mud Eel ended.

Jean Would Walk

Little three-year-old Jean went out for a walk with her father one day. As they started to return her father asked, "Shall we walk back, Jean, or take the street car?"

"Oh, I ruzzer walk, daddy," she replied, "if ou' will tarry me."

Disastrous Landslide

The Frank landslide in Alberta, Canada, occurred on April 29, 1903, when the summit of Mount Turtle crashed down into the valley and spread along it for two miles. As the slide was narrow in the first part of its course, only a small portion of the town was carried away. Sixty-five men, women and children were killed.

The Keystone

A keystone is the central stone at the crown of an arch, sometimes elaborately ornamented with sculpture. All the stones in an arch are shaped so that they act as keys and thus lock each other into position. The keystone is the last to be placed into the arch.

Fruit Season Late, Conditions Good

Growers Report Average Date of Full Bloom About Ten Days Later Than Last Year—Conditions Throughout United States Better.

Although retarded by low temperatures and about ten days behind last year, fruit blossomed well and prospects are reasonably good. Commercial growers reported the average date of full bloom on apples as June 3 in the Lake Ontario region and May 23 in the Hudson valley. These dates are about ten days later than last year. A similar condition prevails with all the other tree fruits, according to the state-federal crop report for June issued from the New York State Department of Farms and Markets.

Apples, with Baldwins relatively light and early varieties heavy, showed 80 per cent of full bloom compared with 72 per cent of full bloom last year. It was heavier in the Hudson valley than in western New York. Because of the cold weather with the consequent lack of activity of insects, some question has arisen as to whether pollination was adequate. While the June 1 condition of 85 is higher than last year and the average, the late date of blooming throws off the comparability and it is too early in the season to make a forecast of production.

Conditions for the United States as a whole were much better than last year and were well above average on June 1. Virginia and Pennsylvania apparently have much better prospects than last year, while Washington is somewhat better though below average.

The striking fact of the peach situation is the greatly increased crops in Georgia and California, due in part to new trees coming into bearing in large numbers. All the northern peach states now show better than average condition.

In New York the early peach forecast of 2,357,000 bushels compares with the harvest of 1,920,000 bushels last year and 2,180,000, the 5-year average. Many young trees have suffered winter injury at the base of the trees and are dying.

The United States peach condition indicates a crop of 58,640,000 bushels compared with 46,565,000 bushels last year.

Although below last year, pears in New York promise better than average production. Practically all other states appear to be better than last year.

The condition reports on plums and prunes in New York was 87 per cent this year and 66 per cent last year; on sour cherries, 82 per cent this year and 77 per cent last year, and on sweet cherries, 87 and 77.

Nutty Natural History

THE JACKSONVILLE PUFFET.

The sport of hunting the puffet is so popular in the vicinity of Jacksonville, Fla., that most of the prominent realtors with protruding bay windows who resemble the puffet in general appearances have stopped developing the more outlying real estate additions for fear of being mistaken for a puffet and fired upon. The Jacksonville Civic and Commerce Association has recently offered a bounty on puffet scalps with the view of exterminating them, as they interfere with the development and extension of this rapidly growing city. The puffet itself, however, is a very innocuous and retiring creature, its bold front being nearly a pose. The nest of the puffet is a very interesting affair, being constructed of isosceles triangles cleverly interwoven with hypotenuses which it picks up along the highways.

A small paper-shell pecan of just the right shape will answer for the body of the puffet, to which is attached a double peanut for the head. The horns are cloves, and the eyes navy beans with inkspots. Cloves are also used for the legs, and the feet are split almond kernels. It is no use to try to construct the nest as only the puffet knows how to do that.

Health turns the Clock Backward

WHY NERVOUSNESS IS AN ENEMY TO HEALTH

C. C. FROUDE.

Nervousness is an enemy to health because it prevents rest and relaxation. Nervous people cannot sit still, and therefore do not get the rest they should from a sitting position. Nervousness prevents sound sleep, and it is equally guilty of preventing concentration, or the ability to hold the mind on a given line of thought for any length of time.

Nervousness is caused by irritating pressure on spinal nerves. This pressure is caused at the spinal nerve opening by displacement of spinal bones from their true alignment. The correction of this defective alignment lies solely in the hands of the chiropractor, whose science teaches him how to detect such points of pressure, and how to make the proper adjustments to start the displaced bone back into proper position. There is no better method of overcoming nervousness than by chiropractic spinal adjustments.

SEVERAL YEARS' SUFFERING ENDED.

"After several years' suffering from eye trouble, rheumatism and nervousness, and getting no results from medical treatment, I can truly say that I got immediate relief as soon as I started chiropractic spinal adjustments. Now my eyes give me no trouble at all, I am not bothered with rheumatism whatever, and my nerves are as steady as a rock."—Jack Green, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 13385.

FOR BETTER FISHING.

Field Stations In The Adirondacks And Improved Methods of Planting.

Albany, June 14.—Conservation Commissioner Alexander Macdonald told of the work that the Commission is doing to improve fishing in a radio talk broadcast from WHAZ Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, last night on "Forest Preserves; Fish and Game of the Adirondacks." He said:

"There is good hunting and fishing in season in practically all parts of the Adirondacks. In some places the waters have become too warm for the native brook trout and the Commission has introduced browns. The Commission believes that all waters should be productive of some kind of fish and is working to that end. To supplement the work of our hatcheries and plant larger trout, we have established a field station at Long Lake for the propagation of brook trout that takes care of the waters in the northern part of Hamilton county. From this station we distribute about 150,000 fingerlings from 3 to 4 inches long each season. Another field station at Speculator and one at Johnstown supply 100,000 trout each.

"The Commission is endeavoring to improve the methods of planting the millions of game fish that are produced in its hatcheries each year to prevent the waste [illegible] from improper planting. [illegible] issued a bulletin on proper methods of fish planting which [illegible] free upon application. We hope some day to be able to plant all fish with experienced men, but thus far we have only been able to do this from our field stations and within a radius of from 15 to 20 miles of our hatcheries.

"We have to be very particular about planting pike and bass because of their cannibalistic habit. They should not be planted in waters inhabited by trout.

"In order that the public may be fully informed as to its rights and privileges in the forest preserve, the Conservation Commission issues booklets describing various sections with maps, regulations governing the use of the forest preserve and a syllabus of the game laws giving the open seasons, bag limits, [illegible]. These may be obtained without charge by applying to the Commission at Albany."

Buy Your Share In the Hospital

Kingston, N. Y., June 9th, 1926.
Dear Mr. Editor:

Have you space for a few words on this hospital drive of ours? Just a little story to begin with.

For over ninety years there lived in Nantucket a fine man who had been for many of those years the captain of a whaling ship. Universally beloved and respected he had always been regarded as comfortably off in the small house where he lived alone, having no relatives in the world. What was our horror, when we came to the island one summer to find that the old gentleman had removed himself, with all his belongings, to the town poor house! Gently pressed for an explanation and urged to accept assistance for some more suitable provision for his last days, this was his reply:

"T'aint possible for me to accept charity—though I'm grateful for all the kind offers I've had. When I see I was livin' longer than I'd cal'lated my money would hold out, I moved right over to Our Island Home where I got a right to be. You see"—his blue eyes twinkled above his long white beard—"I've got money invested there—been a taxpayer for more'n sixty years. Who's got a better right to make use of a thing than the feller that's helped pay for it!"

There you are! Who's got a better right to use this hospital than the man or woman who has helped, in any smallest degree to pay for it? Ten thousand dollars gives no one any more right to use it than ten dollars or ten cents. These gifts, as far as privilege is concerned are identical. It is not a rich man's hospital—let us see that it shall belong to us all by that best of rights—because each one of us has helped to pay for it. Of course you will be free to use it with no contribution to this drive, but if ever you come to its wonderful ministrations, you will enjoy with especial satisfaction, as you lie there receiving the very best that modern medicine and surgery can do for your recovery, the thought that you have money invested here. If some one you love comes back from the grave's edge, you will like to think that your gift, if ever so small, helped to make possible this splendid equipment and service that turned the scale beween life and death.

As for the use of the hospital, whether you have a private room with special nurses, night and day, or a more modest one with the corridor nurse, or one of those good beds in the wards; whether you pay the highest price per week, or nothing at all, you will have the best medical, surgical, and nursing skill that can be found in any part of the world, for our hospital has a reputation that reaches out beyond our own state even. But the one great thing now is for each and every one of us to get into new touch with our hospital, make it really our own by buying a share of it—if only a few bricks! "Who's got a better right to make use of a thing than the feller that's helped pay for it!"

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 14.—Wave of speculative buying in the stock market today swept prices of industrial stocks to higher levels, establishing a new high average for the movement, and sending a number of prominent stocks to record high prices for the year to date.

Montgomery Ward, Kresge, Woolworth, The Retail Tobacco Companies' shares, and American Can were bought freely.

The motor stocks were unusually active and strong, with General Motors establishing a new high above 140 and numerous low-priced stocks like Pierce Arrow, Chrysler and Willys Overland, up a point or more. Hudson sold up 3 points and Studebaker 2. A new spurt in United States Rubber brought that stock to 1¾, stimulating similar moves in the other rubber and tire stocks.

United States Steel at 137½ was only fractionally below its best price of the year. All independent steel shares were strong.

Though Saturday's bank statement showed a deficit of about $5,000,000 in reserves there was very little calling of loans today and the rate ruled at 4 per cent.

Unknown Vessel Reported on Fire

Cordova, Alaska, June 14.—The fate of an unknown vessel on fire in Northern Pacific waters remained a mystery today.

Efforts of the naval communication service to determine the ship's identity so far have been fruitless.

"Fire! Fire! S. O. S. S. O. S. Position fifty-two; thirty-five."

This faint distress call heard by two United States Naval Radio Stations at 3:30 p. m., Sunday has been followed by silence.

The call for help came on a 750-metre wave length and the naval operators recognized the transmitting to be from a Japanese vessel but were unable to make out its call letters due to interference.

Interference from Alaskan Cannery Stations, particularly the radio station at Naknek which refused to "Qrt" or stop sending, prevented the Dutch Harbor Station from getting the call letters of the stricken vessel.

Ancestors Like That

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

PAULINE GRANGER and Rodman Hughes were "among those present" at tea that afternoon at Doris Blake's.

"There's Pauline Granger," someone was telling Rodman at one end of the spacious living room. "William H. Granger's daughter—loads of money—you know Granger's soaps and powders."

"The girl with the reddish hair and the unbecoming brown dress?"

"Yes," agreed his informer. "Is the dress unbecoming? It probably cost enough. Want to meet her?"

"Not if I don't have to," said Rodman, and after that he looked through his artist's eyes once or twice at Pauline, to try to discover just why the brown frock in question was not becoming. Quite impersonally he decided that the girl was not in the least bad looking.

"Who is that young man?" Pauline asked her hostess a little later. "He'd be rather nice to look at if he had a good tailor."

"Why, that's Rodman Hughes. Maybe you've heard of him. An artist—does portraits. He's been quite successful with ancestors lately. You know—he takes old tintypes or daguerreotypes or sketches of people's ancestors and makes wonderful paintings of them."

"I must meet him," said Pauline. "I suppose you'd call us newly rich, wouldn't you? Well, I'm going to get Mr. Hughes to make us a set of ancestors. Father will howl at the idea, but he'll let me have it done."

So Doris Blake sought out the young artist and led him to be presented to Pauline Granger, and Pauline arranged to call at his studio the next day to "talk over ancestors."

So before he quite realized what he was doing Rodman told her of his ambitions. He had wanted to be a portrait painter. He knew he could do it. Meantime, in order to make the money needed for further study abroad he had taken up with this idea of making ancestor portraits to order. It wasn't as high a form of art as painting portraits of live people, but it had its satisfaction.

"Meantime," said Rodman, "I hope that imitating the technique of those old fellows won't spoil my style for life. I've got to keep going at this sort of thing until I can afford two or three years' independence abroad."

Pauline produced several funny little daguerreotypes and tin-types. "This is grandmother Granger, and this is her mother," she said. "This is my mother's grandmother and grandfather."

A less inspired portraitist than Rodman Hughes might have seen precious little material for paintings in these little pictures.

"Of course, I'd want you to give them considerably more tone," said Pauline frankly, "and of course the clothes could be changed."

"I understand," said Rodman, gravely. "In the meantime I'd like you to tell me all you know of these people, their nationality or descent, their virtues and their failings. I have to reconstruct their personalities before I can begin the work. For this lady here in the checked dress—your great grandmother, I'd suggest a pose something like this." Rodman led Pauline to one end of his studio and showed the picture of an aristocratic lady of the early Nineteenth century.

"This is an example of the finest type of portrait work of that period. She was a daughter of an earl. She is my grandmother's mother."

"Imagine having ancestors like that," exclaimed Pauline.

"They do me little good," laughed Rodman, "save with their portraits. I have quite a collection of them and by studying those old portraits I have been able to make pretty good imitations. I believe I'm descended from a French king and there's an English king somewhere along the line. But that's nothing to boast of."

"Still," said Pauline unaffectedly, "I'd love to have ancestors like that. Think how they'd look on the wall!" Rodman laughed and Pauline looked over her pathetic little packet of pictures. "My poor little ancestors look pretty small after yours. Still, I'm not ashamed of them and I think they'd appreciate what I'm having done for them."

So the work was begun, but first Rodman and Pauline had to spend many afternoons together discussing the personalities of these forebears of hers. And all the time Pauline was wishing that she might treble the sum to be paid for the work, to make it possible for Rodman to start at once on the European study that he wanted to take.

After the last portrait had been finished and Pauline stood one day in Rodman's studio he came to her with hands outstretched.

"Pauline," he said, "I love you. I have no right to ask you to marry me now, but I want you to know. I'm going to work very hard, and some day when I've succeeded as a real portrait painter I will want you to know that I have done it all for you. I shall never marry."

"You silly man," said Pauline, "I've been so afraid you wouldn't ask me. And we'll be married in the spring and go abroad and we'll be the happiest people in the world."

And though Rodman protested that he would never accept the bounty of the girl he married, Pauline's dream came true.

It may be a poor rule that won't work both ways, but it's a poorer one that won't work at all.

Debs Ill

Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, ill at his home in Terre Haute, Ind.

Sanity and Insanity Matter of Emotions

Where mental disorder becomes insanity it is difficult to say. Physicians today do not like to use the word insanity, on account of the difficulty of defining it. Sanity is a social concept. A sane person is willing to co-operate with other people in the affairs of life, and has confidence in others in varying degrees, as his judgment guides him. He has a direction of movement and purpose which he is able to control.

Insanity is the reverse of this. Yet it is easily seen from this definition that a perfectly sane person can be violently insane for a minute, five minutes, or half an hour. By the excess of his emotions he can be cut off for the time being from rational judgment of anything or co-operation with anybody, and from any sense of ordered direction of his actions. But sooner or later his reason reasserts itself, and in repeated circumstances of the same sort is likely to be on its guard. Insane people have periodic or permanent inability to overcome their emotions.

Explains Scarcity of Really Clever People

An epigrammatist once wrote: "Clever women hide what they know; clever men hide what they don't know." How true it is. How wise is our epigrammatist to observe and remark on this! Now, then: it is equally true that clever women hide what they don't know; and clever men hide what they know. No one can deny this, wherefore we are forced to the logical conclusion that clever women hide what they know and what they don't know, and clever men hide what they know and what they don't know, and so we see that clever people hide everything! This being thus, and as clever people, being clever, must do their hiding thoroughly and successfully, how can we know they are clever people? May it not well be that people whom we consider dull and stupid are merely clever people busily doing their hiding?

At any rate, this revelation of the hiding process clearly explains why we never, knowingly, meet any clever people.—Exchange.

Why Passersby Laughed

Sometimes under the pressure of time a storekeeper who has to make a hurried call to some other shop or to the bank will grab up some article of merchandise such as a cap or coat and use it for the errand. It doesn't damage the articles any and it sustains no more wear than the ordinary trying on in a store would do. In a few minutes the article is back again in stock as good as new.

This was tried the other morning by a popular merchant. As he went down the street the snickers and giggles of people caused him to wonder what funny thing he looked like in the borrowed cap. On returning to the store he noticed that the type of cap that he had chosen had a large label at the back and that had been the cause of the giggles.—Lawrence Telegram.

The Origin of Pink Lemonade

Nothing less than scandalous is the charge that a pair of pink tights gave the world its first tub of circus lemonade. Tossing in the tights does give a plausible color to this gossip, but to swallow so sordid a slander is also to stomach belief that "property" lemons were used in the good old days. Away with this ghoulish business. Circus lemonade is too venerable an institution to be overthrown by stirring up the ghosts of old tubs. Tartaric acid, aniline dye, and water from the sea lion's tank, though it may have been, there is no beverage so in character with the pleasant mimicry of circus days—a drink of satisfying pretense made for a world of make-believe.—Nation's Business Magazine.

Two Killed in Chicago Storm

Damage Is Expected to Reach Two Million Dollars—Greatest Damage Caused in Agricultural Districts by Cloudburst.

Chicago, June 14.—A light rain was falling today in the wake of the devastating storm that swept over Chicago and the middle west late yesterday, taking a toll of two lives here and causing damage throughout the district that may approximate two million dollars.

Rockford, Ill., was the hardest hit. There a veritable cloudburst occurred. More than four inches of rain fell within thirty minutes. Hundreds of homes were flooded and many bridges were swept away. Water on some thoroughfares reached a depth of eight feet.

The property damage in Rockford alone was estimated at $500,000.

The greatest damage was caused in agricultural districts of Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska, where growing crops of wheat and corn were beaten down or washed away by the heavy rains.

The downpour was accompanied by high winds and lightning, which caused most of the damage in Chicago.

One man was killed when struck by a lightning bolt while walking across a south side prairie. He was John Capusse, father of five small children. Fred Ellwinski was killed when a live wire was blown down upon him.

At Rock Falls, near Sterling, Ill., lightning struck a government warehouse standing at the head of Hennepin Canal. Much damage was done before the fire was brought under control by the Sterling and Rock Falls fire departments.

Seek Lost Malay Kingdom

The "lost Malay Kingdom" is thought to have existed in the island of Jolo, which is the southernmost of the Philippine group. Leading Filipinos are planning an expedition there to uncover, if possible, any records of the old kingdom, which is believed to have existed about 1750. The accounts of the "Malay kingdom" are disbelieved in some high places, and for this reason the expedition has been proposed. There is no particular question that Malays lived there, but the existence of the "kingdom" is doubted.

Dust Fires

No record of a spontaneous dust explosion has ever been obtained, says a report made by the American Chemical society. A spark, flame or other source of fire must be present to ignite the dust.

In the last year $3,000,000 worth of property was destroyed, 45 lives were lost and 28 people were injured by explosions of dust and fires resulting from them.

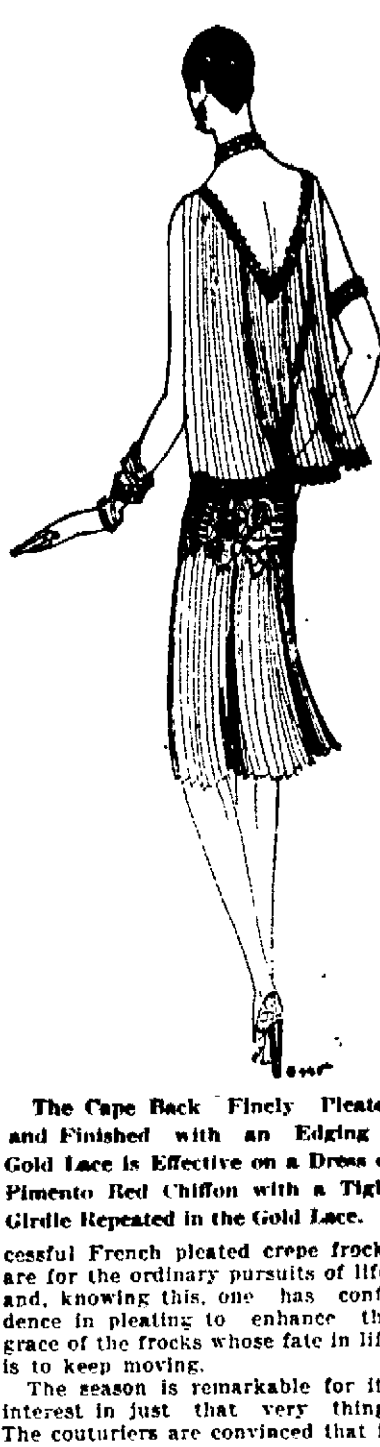
A Dance Frock Must Be Graceful in Motion and Exceedingly Sheer.

Those whose long summer days are prone to end not only with the music of the spheres but the saxophone, will find net a pleasing change from chiffon. Obviously the summer dance frock should be a diaphanous thing of zephyr lightness; yet unseasonable as is the idea, the Parisienne is rather insistent on her dance frock being black. It goes without saying that it must be sheer. She has lace, chiffon, net, and combinations of them all, and some which involve taffeta and organdie from which to choose.

The chiffon frock may, of course, be figured, and so may many of the net ones, since printed nets are among the original things fashion has to offer just now. One may always rely on pleating to enhance the charm of a gown, and is well within the rules to apply it to evening gowns. Every one knows how successful French pleated crepe frocks are for the ordinary pursuits of life, and, knowing this, one has confidence in pleating to enhance the grace of the frocks whose fate in life is to keep moving.



The Cape Back Finely Pleated and Finished with an Edging of Gold Lace is Effective on a Dress of Pimento Red Chiffon with a Tight Girdle Repeated in the Gold Lace.

The season is remarkable for its interest in just that very thing. The couturiers are convinced that it is more important that a gown should be lovelier in motion than in silhouette. To this end it has fulness, flowing shawl and cape effects, and either pleatings, ruffles, or fringe to accent the movement.

Fringe at the moment has great merit, and there are many gowns in tiers either of it or of pleating. Net is a relatively inexpensive material and one which lends itself charmingly to the movement of the dance. It has not replaced chiffon, but is a formidable rival, particularly for the greatly-to-be-desired black gown. (Copyright, 1926, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York.)

FOOD FOR THE SICK

Food is so often more important than medicine in illness that the study of invalid cookery should be a part of every girl's education.

To know how to make a good broth, beef tea and tasty gruel and a well-toasted piece of toast is knowledge which is invaluable.

For a convalescing patient who needs to be coaxed to eat, a tempting tray with the prettiest china and the daintiest linen should be used. When the invalid tray cannot be provided, use a large tray and support it on each side with books to hold its weight from the patient, and keep it from tipping.

Gruels are such important foods that it is fitting that proper thought be given to their preparation. Use two to three tablespoonfuls of cereal to a quart of water and cook for at least three hours, strain before serving; this is used in the liquid diet.

Chicken Broth.—A good broth may be prepared from the neck, wing tips and feet of the chicken. Scald the feet, removing the skin. Cover the meat with cold water, adding a stalk of celery for flavor; simmer for two to three hours. Season, strain. Often no pepper and very little salt is allowed.

Lemon Jelly.—Soak a tablespoonful of gelatin in three tablespoonfuls of water, add three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and five tablespoonfuls of sugar. Stir until dissolved. Pour into a wet mold and put on ice to harden. This will make two servings. With the prepared gelatins of different flavor one may, with little labor, have a dish of jelly always ready.

Baked Custard.—Beat lightly two eggs, add a pint of good rich milk, and flavor with nutmeg, adding three to four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Pour into custard cups, set in hot water and bake just long enough to set. Thrust a knife into the center of the cup; if it comes out clean the custard is done.

Unexplored Canada

Seventy-five per cent of Canada has not yet been seen by white men, according to R. H. Knight of Ottawa, president of the Association of Dominion Land Surveyors, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. He pointed out that travel is confined to the known routes and few persons ever visit the uninhabited regions that lie beyond. Only a small portion of the country has been mapped, Mr. Knight said.

From surveys made last year, it was discovered that the province of Ontario has about 1,500 square miles more territory than was previously estimated. During an exploratory trip in the northwest section of Canada, never before visited by white men, a series of lakes, 200 miles long, were discovered. It was also found that parts of the province of Quebec had sunk.

To Tax Feet

After a fixed date all Chinese women under thirty whose feet are still bound will be taxed a sum equal to three dollars a month. This is an effort on the part of two Chinese militarists, not only to add to the country's revenue but to abolish a vicious custom which has persisted from time immemorial in China, in spite of many comparatively modern attempts to create feeling against it, and so in time do away with it.

Legend has it that the custom started in early times to prevent women from running away to seek adventures. It has recently been estimated that there are still 70,000,000 pairs of deformed feet in China, and that in the coming generation there will probably be more.

Keeps Tab on Autos

Albert Lynn, whose hobby is counting automobiles that pass his home at Berwick, Pa., expects this year to pass the 1,000,000 mark. He began counting in 1913, and all his spare time has since been devoted to that work, with the result that he is now well past the 800,000 mark. In 1924 he put into use a specially made counting device. With this, the first 100,000 was completed in 251 hours of counting time, the second block of 100,000 in 215 hours and 40 minutes, the third in 200 hours and 15 minutes, and the fourth 100,000 in 190 hours and 30 minutes. Traffic passing his home in both directions is counted, but motorcycles are not included.

A Hint For The Young Jelly Maker

By Elizabeth Palmer

Even your mother-in-law can't make better jam or jelly than you can make by the new Certo method.

For with Certo no practice is required to pick the right fruit at just the right stage of ripeness. And no experienced judgment is called for to say just when your fruit has been "boiled down" enough.

Any fine, ripe fruit you like will jell perfectly with Certo. You do not have to boil it down. Just bring your fruit and sugar to a boil, add Certo, let it boil hard for a couple of minutes, and it's done.

Your jams and jellies will look prettier and taste better, because the short boil with Certo saves the bright color and delicate flavor of your fresh fruit. It also saves the juice which used to boil away, so that you get half again more jam or jelly from your fruit.

A book of simple, tested recipes comes with each bottle of Certo. Your grocer carries Certo, or you can send 10c (for postage) and get a trial half-size bottle which will make from 6 to 10 glasses of jam or jelly, depending upon the recipe used. Address Douglas-Pectin Corporation, 5484 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

Fat Society Women Reduce With Gum

Although New York society women can easily afford the most elaborate reducing treatments, they have eagerly adopted a new way to slenderize. Science discovered a remarkable, harmless medicinal ingredient purely vegetable—free from thyroid or dangerous drugs—that quickly dissolves the fat cells. Reductions of several pounds a week are reported. No starving necessary. It acts quickest when well chewed—hence it is embodied in a deliciously flavored chewing gum called "Slends." At the request of many of our stout townspeople local druggists have stocked large quantities of Slends. Start to take Slends today—fat will begin to go tomorrow.

ROBIE AT ROSENDALE DRAWS BIG CROWDS

Sunday was a record day in the village of Rosendale for church attendance. Large congregations greeted Evangelist Robie at both services, much deep interest being manifested. The music and messages were inspiring. The Kingston orchestra added greatly to the services. Several delegations were present both morning and evening from various places, as far away as Philmont where Mr. Robie conducted a successful campaign a short time ago. Service will be held every evening this week at 8 o'clock except Monday. Every one welcome and urged to be present. Evangelist Robie is an exceptional live wire and especially gifted in musical ability and in preaching power. Some new feature every evening. The full orchestra will be present Tuesday evening and every night this week. The theme of the message Tuesday night will be "Who Is Who in Rosendale."

Tagging Major League Bases

With Gehrig and Lazzeri operating the home run steam roller, the Yankees beat the Browns, 6 to 5, and increased their lead over the Athletics to ten games. Sam Jones held the fort when the Browns got rough with young Miles Thomas.

George Uhle held the A's to two hits and the Indians won 4 to 1. Sam Gray, who essayed to pitch for the Mackmen, lasted less than an inning.

Thomas, White Sox freshman, also turned in a two hit game, whitewashing the Senators 3 to 0. The Sox are now only half a game behind the Athletics.

The Reds bowed to the Giants, 10 to 3, but retained their hold on first place. Greenfield pitched a neat game for the winners while the Giants knocked Jakie May out of the picture in the first inning and pounded his three successors freely.

Brooklyn beat the Cubs, 6 to 5, with the aid of splendid relief pitching by Jess Petty.

Wiltse, a rookie and about the only pitcher who can win for the Red Sox, downed the Tigers 7 to 3. Regan, Boston's new infielder, got four hits.

VICTORY EAGLES AGAIN BEAT THE CHAMPIONS

Friday night at Block Park the Victory Eagles again took the champions into camp by the score of 11-9. The Champions were leading up to the seventh inning, when with two men on base, J. Houghtaling slammed a double to right and scored on Matheia's double which followed, tying the score. In the eighth inning both teams scored a run and in the ninth inning the Eagles scored two runs. It looked as though the Champions were going to tie the score in the last half of the ninth, when with a man on second and first McDonald hit a drive to centerfield. It looked like a hit but Fischer centerfielder of the Eagles made a shoestring catch, saving the game for the Eagles. Dulin who was sent into pinch hit, failed to connect. McDonald also fanned ending the game. The battery for the losers was McDonald, and Kiefer, p. and Sass and Kiefer, c.

The Eagles lined up as follows:

H. Houghtaling, s. s., Jordan, 2b., Gorman, l. f.; Rosenzweig, 3b.; Fischer, c. f.; J. Houghtaling, c.; Murphy, r. f., Frieze, 1b., Matheia, p.

The Eagles would like to hear from the following teams. Huttons Brickyard, White Eagles, Bluebird, and Triangles, and any other teams. Any one wishing a game with the Eagles communicate with J. Houghtaling, 175 Hasbrouck avenue, city.

Indians Used Wampum as General Currency

As is generally known, wampum was a sort of Indian money or means of exchange among tribes encountered by the early colonists along the Atlantic seaboard, and for a considerable distance inland, R. W. Thorp writes, in Adventure Magazine. The term itself is derived from an Algonquin word and referred to small shell beads of two kinds or descriptions, the difference in the two lying in the color, one sort being white and the other violet. The violet beads are nearly always referred to as black wampum by historians. They were all made in a cylindrical form, averaging about one-eighth of an inch in diameter and one-fourth inch in length. Most of these beads were bored in the center and placed upon strings, some of which were afterward woven into bracelets, girdles and the like, and passed among the savages the same as gold and silver among the civilized peoples. Very little wampum was carried in its loose form, the single strings being about the smallest unit of value, and that, according to length, as a matter of course. The black sort was the most valuable, and was worth, according to measure, ten shillings per fathom; while the white was worth only half that sum, probably owing to the fact that the former was made from a certain grade of shell, while the latter was a product made from various shells.

The bracelets were next highest in value above the single strings and were made about nine inches long, woven in stripes of black and white, six pieces in a row, the warp consisting of leather thongs and the woof of thread. The bracelets were generally worn by the squaws, wrapped twice or three times about the wrist.

The finest of the wampum, and highest in value, was woven into girdles. These girdles were of two sorts. One kind was about a yard in length, with fourteen strings in a row, woven into black and white squares, continued obliquely from edge to edge. The other was more complicated, consisting of fifteen strings in a row woven into black diamond squares and crosses within them, the spaces between being filled with white. When not worn as the richest ornament of the possessor, the girdles were used in large payments or as a treasured present or gift on auspicious occasions.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

Aside from WGY and WJZ, two of the best stations last night, were WBZ at Boston and WOK at Chicago. There was little static or interference.

WPRC, Harrisburg, Penn., 215 meters, 100 watts, came in like super power—almost.

WEAM, North Plainfield, N. J., has increased from 15 to 230 watts, which is why it is now heard here.

It would be interesting to know what gave WJZ the pip Sunday afternoon. The carrier wave came in and went off at intervals but at no time carried any signal. It seemed that a sincere but ineffective effort was being made.

WEAF was normal during this period and in the early evening presented a fine program.

A persistent wire hum was all that kept WDBZ from a 100 per cent record in its Sunday morning broadcasting, and that was in no way the fault of those who operated this station. Failure of the singing after the long prayer to register leads to a suspicion that for good work the church should have two microphones. A microphone costs at least $100 and WDBZ has not got $100. It would have if those who enjoy the broadcasting would join the WDBZ Radio Club by sending $2 to it at the Chamber of Commerce.

It is hoped that the program for the Wednesday evening broadcasting will be promptly and correctly given out for publication this week. The Freeman is willing to aid but does not care to be led into publishing programs that are incorrect.

The Children's Day program next Sunday morning should lend itself to broadcasting especially well.

Those who enjoy real fiddling by main strength and the old dance and folk songs had a pleasant hour with the Hill Billies, WRC or WJZ, early Saturday evening.

WNYC gave a remarkably good broadcast, descriptive and band music, of the school parade in New York city Saturday afternoon.

"Animal Crackers," as sung from Syracuse, was almost as inspiring at "Horses." WJZ followed 10 minutes later with the same song.

LAKE KATRINE.

Lake Katrine, June 14—One of the largest and most enjoyable meetings in some time was held by Lake Katrine Grange on Monday evening last, when they had as their guests, 52 members from Clintondale Grange accompanied by Worthy Pomona Master Harold V. Story and wife, making altogether 125. The program was in charge of Mrs. William Hookey and Mrs. Harcourt of Clintondale. After a piano solo by Miss Mantovani, the lecturer greeted the visiting members by using a quotation of Portia from the "Merchant of Venice."

Quartet—By Sisters Borland, Seclin, Brothers Jenkins and Dingee, accompanied by Sister Thompson of Clintondale

Reading—King Pharoah's Daughter. by Mrs. Gerow

Piano and Violin Duet—Mrs. T. Brink and Wesley Parish

Reading—Christopho Columbo, by Mr. Gerow, who for an encore sang Lad O' Dreams

Jokes—By William Swart

Auto Romance—Read by John Dimler

Duet—By Mr. and Mrs. William Hookey, from the musical comedy, Sunny

Sketch—By Stephen Sahler and Roger Keough

Dance—By Roger Keough, accompanied by Burlin Winchell on the accordian.

Every number, judging from the thunderous applause was thoroughly enjoyed and each were obliged to respond with an encore. A bounteous repast followed, then dancing. The musicians received many compliments for their good peppy jazz, which is the only kind the young people will tolerate nowadays.

Miss Mantavani, Mr. Parish and Mr. Dederick were the performers for the dance music. Lake Katrine Grange has accepted an invitation to visit New Paltz on June 19. Mrs. T. Brink and R. Everett, committee on arrangements.

Fred Frear was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Kieffer last week end.

Miss Natalie Fiske of New York, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Hookey.

A. B. Bogert attended the Master and Lecturers' Conference at Brookside, near Newburgh, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Bavunberg, Miss Elsie Ey of Spring Valley, Long Island, and W. W. Watts of New York, were guests at the home of Alfred Mantavani.
